Chapter 1

Introduction

1.1 What is the problem?

1.1.1 Introduce problem

1.1.2 Indicate context for problem

1.2 Why is this problem important/worth investigating?

*Most important section in this chapter*

1.3 The structure of this document

Chapter 2

Literature Review

2.1 What research has already been done?

2.1.1 Domain specific vs Domain independent

2.2 Relevance to this work

2.3 Appraisal of other research

2.4 Identify gap in research

Chapter 3

Identify Potential Solution

3.1 Use appropriate methods and techniques to:

3.1.1 Identify requirements of the solution

3.1.2 Identify structure and approach of the solution

Chapter 4

Development of Solution

- 4.1 Describe investigation and development of solution as well as results

Chapter 5

Analyze Work

- 5.1 Critically analyze all aspects of the project
- 5.2 Identify possible future work
- 5.3 Analysis and appraisal of methods and techniques used
- 5.4 Elaborate on lessons learned

Chapter 6

Conclusion

- Should be a natural end point of the argument started by the Introduction
- Draws upon problem description and literature review to work done with expected results
- Should be a natural end point of the argument started by the Introduction
- Should draw together lessons learned from critical evaluation
- Should clearly identify contributions to current knowledge or practice

Appendix A

Appendices

A.1 Tools used

A.1.1 Clojure

Clojure is a dialect of lisp that can either be compiled and run on the JVM or compiled into javascript to either be run on the browser or in a nodejs VM.

A.1.2 Boot

A.2 Guides

A.2.1 User Guide

A.2.2 Management Guide

A.2.3 Developer Guide

A.3 Code

A.3.1 Important Parts Only?
